DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

- (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zendle et al. (6,628,627) in view of Pedersen (2003/0125089).

Regarding claim 1, Zendle discloses a point-of-presence 414(or customer premise) (See figs. 4-5) comprising: a wireless transceiver 505; a router 507 in communication with the wireless transceiver 505; an inherently a primary power supply; a network having at least one backbone router, the network being in a location away from the point-of-presence 414; communication link between the router 507 and the network, providing communication between the backbone router and the point-of-presence router 507; at least an antenna 418 in communication with the wireless transceiver 505, the antenna 418 providing the basic link to the network for a subscriber having IP address access to the network and means for transceiving data thereto (See figs. 3-5 and col. 6 line 47 to col. 7 line 9, col. 7 lines 39-48, col. 9 line 18 to col. 11 line 8). However, Zendle does not mention the point-of present comprises primary and secondary wireless radio controlled by an Ethernet switch and an uninterruptible power supply (UPS) connected to the primary power supply for providing power to the radios, the Ethernet switch and the router. Since both the wireless transceiver as disclosed by Zendle and the wireless radios controlled by the Ethernet switch asserted by the instant application perform the same task that is to provide multichannel service to the user (See col. 6 line 63 to col. 7 line 6, col. 9 lines 18-25 and Specification page 6 lines 17-21) and the technique of using plurality of wireless radios controlled by a switch to provide multi-channel service within a customer premise is well known in art as shown by Pedersen (See fig. 2 and page 3 [0035-0036]); therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the plurality of wireless radios as suggested by Pedersen for the advantage of avoiding service interruption while performing necessary maintenance and/or repair to the wireless radios of system. Further, since uninterruptible power supply (UPS) such as battery, is common in the art; therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to add an UPS to Zendle's system in order to keep the system being operable during a power outage.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
